(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Wilmington, N. C., July 10—After a careful investigation of the typhoid fover situation in this city, in which the history of each of the cases was thoroughly investigated, and all surroundings probed, it has been decided that the fly is responsible for nearly all the fever. This has given an impetus here to the enforcement of the law calling for the banishment of all cow stables, certain stringent requirements of horse stables and other essential sanitary regulations.

This afternoon the keel of an airship, which a company of this city of the present month it is claimed the air craft is built along new lines, with no wood about it; that it is light and can be more easily controlled, while being able to carry up several people at one time.
